AB 1790 Implementation Guide and Toolkit
for Community Mental Health & Managed Care and Fee-for-Service Providers
Recommendations to Remove Barriers to Accessing Adoption-Competent Mental Health Professionals

Prepared by Families NOW with funding from Sierra Health Foundation, Walter S. Johnson Foundation,
California Department of Social Services and California Association of Adoption Agencies

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This guide and toolkit could not have been completed without time and resources from a broad array of stakeholders united in their concern that adoption and permanency-competent mental health services are available to all families making a lifelong commitment to parent children in foster care.

We offer respectful gratitude to former Assemblymember Roger Dickinson for recognizing the importance of carrying and passing AB 1790 to increase availability of and access to mental health professionals with specialized training and experience in adoption and permanency clinical issues. Special thanks also goes to Les Spahnn, Assemblymember Dickinson's legislative director who worked with us to get the bill passed.

Kathy Van Osten deserves special recognition for her pro bono legislative consultant support. She is our hero.

The following funders made this project possible. Our deep appreciation goes out to them:

- Sierra Health Foundation for core funding and publishing support
- Walter S. Johnson Foundation for core funding
- California Department of Social Services for core funding, and
- California Association of Adoption Agencies for co-sponsoring the bill and financial support

Credit for the richness of the recommendations you will find in this guide belongs to the members of the AB 1790 Stakeholders Group. We thank them for their time and expertise as they took on the task of identifying the barriers that prevent adoptive and other permanency families from accessing adoption-competent mental health services. The recommendations they offer for removing the barriers are thoughtful, insightful and appropriately targeted. For a complete list of the Stakeholders Group, see the inside back cover of this guide.

Thanks too to Debbie Riley, Center for Adoption Support & Education (C.A.S.E.) for her leadership in making adoption competency mental health training accessible. Special appreciation to CBHDA and Bill Arroyo for adding expertise and support to the project, Jeff Rackmil, Alameda County Behavioral Health Care Services, for his time and thoughtful input as we developed the sample Survey Monkey questionnaire, and to Kim Medina for help developing the Tip Sheets you will find in the guide.

Special thanks go to my key "go to" experts Richard Knecht, Lynn Thull, Mike Schertell and Valerie Earley.

MEETING THE MENTAL HEALTH NEEDS OF ADOPTIVE AND GUARDIANSHIP CHILDREN, YOUTH AND FAMILIES

WHY IT MATTERS

Belonging to a committed permanent family can create the best environment for healing from a history of trauma and loss. But simply joining a permanent family is often not sufficient to compensate for a child's adverse childhood experiences (ACEs). At different developmental ages and stages, youth can re-experience or process trauma differently. Services may be necessary to help youth understand their past histories and to reconcile emotions related to adoption or guardianship.

Some families will need or want professional help when these concerns arise. Working with a mental health professional who does not understand adoption and permanency clinical issues can result in ineffective or even damaging treatment. Rather than getting the help needed, many adoptive parents and guardians are misunderstood, even blamed for their child's challenges, leaving the family in more difficulty than when they arrived.

Likewise, many children feel misunderstood just like the parents. They are often blamed for behaviors that have protected them from harm at other stages of their lives, rather than being helped to understand and integrate their past histories, to process emotions related to adoption or guardianship, and learn new, and developmentally appropriate ways to heal past traumas. The simple act of helping families understand their children's perspectives is critically important.

LEGISLATIVE IMPERATIVE: AB 1790 (2014 – DICKINSON)

This Guide and Toolkit offers tools and tips to assist agencies and mental health professionals implement recommendations made by the AB 1790 Stakeholder Group on how to remove barriers to the provision of mental health services by adoption-competent professionals. The recommendations are grounded in the guidance found in California's Integrated Core Practice Model.

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE AND TOOLKIT

Terminology

Because the needs of adoptive and guardianship families overlap so closely, throughout this guide, the terms "adoption" and "adoption-competent" should be understood to encompass "guardianship" and "guardianship-competent."

Recommendations

The recommendations are grouped in categories, ranging from creating procedures to support adoption and permanency-informed practice, training and skill building for staff, and maximizing funding options.

- Consider a first read-through with an eye to low-hanging-fruit implementation items.

Self-Assessment Tool

This tool is designed to help you measure your organization against the AB 1790 Stakeholder recommendations. It can help staff and leaders identify opportunities for program improvement, assist in professional development, and inform organizational policy change.

- Consider recruiting a staff taskforce to complete the self-assessment, including comments and recommendations for actions to be taken.
- Build an action plan and timeline to implement prioritized recommendations.

Tip Sheets

Each guide has a tip sheet for the particular sector, as well as reproducible tip sheets to share with adoptive and guardianship parents and youth. These are designed to aid your process to meet the mental health needs of families.

DEFINITION: ADOPTION-COMPETENT MENTAL HEALTH PROFESSIONAL (See Endnotes on page 5)

The National Adoption Competency Mental Health Training Initiative (2018)

An adoption-competent mental health professional has:

- The requisite professional education and professional licensure to provide clinical services;
- A family-based, strengths-based and evidence-based approach to working with children and youth and their adoptive and birth families;
- Well-developed knowledge, skills and values in clinically working with children and youth with a history of abuse, neglect, trauma and other adverse early experiences;
- Well-developed knowledge, skills and values in clinically working with adoptive families and birth families; and
- The ability to clinically work with adopted children and youth and their adoptive and birth families with sensitivity to and respect for racial, ethnic and cultural heritage, sexual orientation and gender identity, and health and disability issues.

An adoption-competent mental health professional has a full understanding of the nature of adoption as a form of family formation and the different types of adoption; the clinical issues that are associated with grief, separation and loss, attachment, and adoptive identity formation; the common individual and family developmental challenges in the experience of adoption; and the characteristics and skills that make adoptive families successful.

An adoption-competent mental health professional is highly skilled in conducting full assessments and using a range of evidence-based and promising therapies that are trauma informed in order to:

- Effectively engage adoptive families toward the mutual goal of helping the child or youth to heal;
- Empower parents to recognize themselves as agents of healing and the experts on their child or youth and to advocate for their child or youth;
- Assist adoptive families to strengthen or develop and practice parenting skills that support attachment, healthy family relationships and long-term well-being; and
- Engage extended families and other networks to support adopted children and youth and their adoptive and birth families.

“You simply cannot expect a child to attach to a new family when he/she has not faced and healed from the grief and loss of not being a part of his/her birth family.”

— Debbie Riley,
Center for Adoption Support and Education

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR MEETING THE MENTAL HEALTH NEEDS OF ADOPTIVE AND GUARDIANSHIP FAMILIES

Community Mental Health, Managed Care Agencies and Fee-for-Service Providers

CREATE PROCEDURES TO SUPPORT ADOPTION AND PERMANENCY-INFORMED PRACTICE

- Include a question on all agency inquiry and intake forms that identifies if members of the family have experienced foster care, adoption or guardianship;
- Before referring an adoptive or guardianship family to a clinician, be sure that the clinician has specialized training and experience in adoption and permanency clinical issues;
- Make a targeted effort to recruit and hire clinicians with specialized training and experience in adoption and permanency clinical issues;
- Complete the Agency Self-Assessment to guide your organization's efforts to improve clinical practice to meet the needs of adoptive and other permanency families (included in this guide – page 7).

ADDRESS THE STIGMA OF SEEKING AND RECEIVING MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

- Provide training and/or information for families to explain the value of mental health services in dealing with trauma, loss, abuse and neglect issues;
- Stress to adoptive parents, guardians and youth that seeking mental health services is a sign of strength;
- Make Tip Sheet for Adopted Youth and Those in Guardianships (page 35) and Tip Sheet for Adoptive Parents and Guardians (page 29) available in your waiting room and directly to youth and families served;
- Share web-based resources such as 9 Ways to Fight Mental Health Stigma (see Resources, page 21).

SUPPORT PROFESSIONAL CLINICAL DEVELOPMENT

- Make evidence-informed adoption competency training¹ available to clinical staff and strongly encourage or require staff and contracted providers to participate;
- Open adoption competency training provided for your staff to other mental health agencies and providers;
- Provide options for adoption competency training outside of normal clinical hours;
- Provide time and encouragement for staff to complete the NTI adoption competency mental health training (free 25-hour online training);²
- Require all staff working with families impacted by adoption and guardianship to complete specialized training in adoption and permanency clinical issues;
- Ensure that training provided for your staff addresses cultural issues and concerns of adoptive and guardianship families, including families of color, single-parent families, LGBTQ families and relative families.

PROMOTE AWARENESS OF THE NEED FOR ADOPTION-COMPETENT MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

- Inform your community that you provide adoption-competent mental health services;
- Provide literature for staff and adoptive and guardianship families regarding selecting and working with a therapist skilled in adoption and permanency clinical issues; disseminate Finding an Adoption-Competent Therapist or similar document;³
- In your newsletters, blogs and publications, include articles regarding importance of adoptive and guardianship families working with therapists with specialized training and experience in adoption and permanency clinical issues;
- Provide youth engagement organizations with training on:
 - a. adoption/permanency clinical issues;
 - b. general mental health training on engaging youth living with mental health issues⁴.

ADDRESS THE LACK OF ACCESS TO ADOPTION-COMPETENT SERVICES

- Create a strong adoption/permanency-competent service delivery system within your organization; encourage others to do the same;
- Take steps necessary to meet the mental health adoption competencies identified by the National Adoption Competency Mental Health Training Initiative (NTI)⁵ (see page 2);
- Partner with your child welfare department to advocate to your county Mental Health Plan (MHP) and California Department of Health Care Services to ensure access to adequate EPSDT and managed care funds to provide needed adoption-competent mental health services;
- Ensure availability of culturally competent mental health services within your pool of providers with specialized training and experience in adoption and permanency clinical issues;
- List your adoption-competent mental health providers on Centralize Post Adoption Resources web site: www.cakidsconnection.org/PostAdoption;⁵ keep list current.

COLLECT DATA

- Create and distribute a survey to determine whether your clinical staff and contracted clinical staff:
 - Have an intake and assessment protocol that addresses adoption and permanency clinical issues;
 - Have specialized training and experience in adoption and permanency clinical issues;
 - Address cultural issues and concerns of adoptive and guardianship families, including families of color, single-parent families, LGBTQ families and relative families;
 - See page 16 for sample survey questions;
- Track how many of the families you serve have members that have experienced foster care, adoption or legal guardianship;
- Track how many were provided services by clinicians with specialized training and experience in adoption and permanency clinical issues;
- Compare clinical outcomes between those served by adoption-competent staff and those served by staff without specialized training and experience.

MAXIMIZE FUNDING OPTIONS

- Partner with county child welfare department to use Title IV-E training funds to provide quality, in-depth adoption competency mental health training for clinical staff providing services to adoptive and guardianship families;
- Play an active role in your county MHSA Stakeholder group to advocate for:
 - Use of MHSA Community Services and Supports, Prevention & Early Intervention, and Workforce Development funds to provide adoption and permanency-competent mental health services and clinician training;
 - Allocation of portion of MHSA funds at risk for reversion to provide adoption-competency clinical training to mental health providers;⁶
- Encourage your county to:
 - Use Medi-Cal Workforce Development funds to provide adoption-competent mental health training for providers;
 - Use county mental health realignment dollars for adoption support services;
 - Use federal Promoting Safe and Stable Families Funds (PSSF) for adoption support services;⁷
 - Use Adoption Assistance Program de-link savings for post-adoption training and services as required by federal law.⁸
- Make County Board of Supervisors aware of savings resulting from reduction in adoption disruptions due to increased access to and availability of adoption-competent mental health providers. Advocate for board approval to reinvest those savings to further increase the number of adoption-competent mental health providers.^{9,10}
- For more information on funding, refer to the Funding Matrix, page 17.

INTEGRATE WITH CORE PRACTICE MODEL¹¹

- Deliver adoption and permanency support services within Core Practice Model framework, integrating initial and ongoing engagement, assessment, service planning, delivery, coordination and care management, including monitoring and adapting services, and transitioning when care is completed;
- Coordinate access to services for members of adoptive and guardianship families in collaboration with highly integrated Systems of Care—where county partners share fiscal, personnel and technical resources;
- Ensure that service professionals empower youth and family members through inclusive decision making.

ENDNOTES FOR RECOMMENDATIONS

1 A number of trainings are available in California:

- ACT – An Adoption and Permanency Curriculum for Child Welfare and Mental Health Professionals
ACT is a post-graduate permanency curriculum that provides intensive practice and clinically informed training to adoption and permanency professionals and community-based therapists. The curriculum expands the application of techniques and knowledge from related fields, such as education, mental health and neurobiology to the practice of adoption and relative guardianship. ACT is designed to advance and inform adoption practice, expand the pool of qualified child welfare and mental health providers available to adoptive and guardianship families, integrate permanency practice across an array of programs, and engage and retain qualified professional staff in adoption and post-permanency services. ACT transmits core competencies to individual professionals and to agency staff groups seeking to improve and standardize their programs with shared, quality knowledge and a commitment to integrated practice principles.
<http://www.kinshipcenter.org/education-institute/classes/professional-classes.html>
- TAC – Training for Adoption Competency
TAC is a post-master's curriculum designed by Center for Adoption Support and Education (C.A.S.E.) with the assistance of a national advisory board of adoption experts. Through classroom and remote instruction as well as clinical case consultation, TAC students master 18 areas of knowledge, values and skills that are critical to adoption-competent mental health services.
<http://adoptionsupport.org/adoption-competency-initiatives/training-for-adoption-competency-tac/>
- Adoption Competency Training – North American Council on Adoptable Children (NACAC)
This in-depth training, developed in adherence to NACAC's national best practice advisory committee's identified goals and objectives, helps mental health practitioners and child welfare workers understand the importance of building skills and knowledge related to working with adoptive and guardianship families. This training emphasizes family strength to ensure clinical practices are family-based and value all members of the adoption triad. Providers (including parent mentors, school personnel, community support workers, pastoral counselors, and mental health workers) who work with adoptive and guardianship families will benefit from the opportunity to build their skills, knowledge, empathy and understanding of this journey, as they learn to seek resources in their home states and counties that can meet families' needs.
<https://www.nacac.org/get-training/training-by-request/adoption-competency/>

2 NTI – National Adoption Competency Mental Health Training Initiative is a free online training designed to enhance the capacity of child welfare professionals and mental health practitioners to understand and effectively address the mental health and other complex needs of children and adolescents moving to permanency through adoption or guardianship or already in adoptive or guardianship placements. NTI will provide professionals in all states, tribes and territories access to two free, state-of-the-art, evidence-informed, standardized web-based trainings to provide the casework and clinical practices to promote permanency, child well-being and family stability. The training for child welfare professionals is a 20-hour training with an additional three hours for child welfare supervisors, along with a downloadable Supervisor Coaching and Activity Guide. The training for mental health professionals is a 25-hour curriculum with coaching sessions offered during the pilot. 2018 trainings are only available in pilot sites, including California, and will be available nationally beginning in 2019. For more information about accessing the NTI trainings, go to: www.adoptionsupport.org/nti. NTI is funded through the Department of Health and Human Services, Administration for Children and Families, Children's Bureau, Cooperative Agreement #90CO1121.

3 AB 1006 (2017 – Maienschein) amended WIC 371 and WIC 16119 to require adoptive and guardianship families to be given written information regarding the importance of working with mental health providers that have specialized adoption/permanency clinical training and experience should their families need clinical support, and a description of the desirable clinical expertise the family should look for when choosing an adoption- or permanency-competent mental health professional. The statute requires the information to be given at each of the following milestones in the journey to permanency:

- At the time of application for adoption of a child who is potentially eligible for AAP;
- When the court orders a child placed or adoption or has appointed a relative or nonrelative legal guardian;
- Immediately prior to finalization of the adoption decree.

See Finding an Adoption Competent Therapist, Handouts, page 26. As this guide goes to print, CDSS is developing a brochure to fill the mandated requirement regarding the written information. To request information on the availability of the brochure email apu@dss.ca.gov.

4 Youth Empowerment Program <http://www.cfpic.org/projects/yep>

5 Centralized Post Adoption Resource Site, funded by CDSS and managed by California Kids Connection (CKC). Includes a menu of ten categories of post-permanency resources. Whether a family is looking for summer camps, skilled therapists, or the latest information about SOGIE related developments, they may click on a topic and find a list of providers in or near their county of residence. If a family does not find the resource they were looking for, they may also contact the CKC referral line by calling 1(800) KIDS-4US. This toll-free line connects families directly with CKC program staff to answer additional inquiries. Monolingual Spanish speaking families are also encouraged to call the referral line to speak with someone in Spanish. These community-based resources and services are updated often, so families should check back to get the most current information. <https://www.cakidsconnection.org/PostAdoption>

6 Under the MHSA, funds are distributed to counties for local assistance, and must be spent for their authorized purpose within three years or revert to the state to be deposited into the fund and be available for other counties in future years. AB 114 (2017 Committee on Budget) includes language that will ensure that MHSA funds are being used to provide critical community mental health services. <http://www.counties.org/csac-bulletin-article/mental-health-services-act-issue-resolved-budget>

7 Promoting Safe and Stable Families (PSSF): Title IV-B, Subpart 2, of the Social Security Act. The primary goals of PSSF are to prevent the unnecessary separation of children from their families, improve the quality of care and services to children and their families, and ensure permanency for children by reuniting them with their parents, by adoption or by another permanent living arrangement. States are required to spend 20% of their funding for each of the following service areas: family support, family preservation, time-limited family reunification, and adoption promotion and support. Funds go directly to child welfare agencies and eligible Indian tribes to be used in accordance with their five-year plans. <https://www.acf.hhs.gov/cb/resource/pssf-title-iv-b-subpart-2-ssa>

8 Federal PL 110-351 (Fostering Connections to Success and Increasing Adoptions Act) allows states to shift otherwise qualified non-federal AAP cases to Title IV-E eligible cases by de-linking the federal eligibility income requirements from the Aid to Families with Dependent Children-Foster Care (AFDC-FC). A child defined by law as an “applicable child” no longer needs to meet the 1996 AFDC-FC income requirements to be eligible for Title IV-E funding. The de-link was applied to all new cases that were phased in based on age groups. Currently, any AAP-eligible child adopted at age 2 or above is now federally eligible for federal AAP.

To conform to PL 110-351 (Fostering Connections to Success and Increasing Adoptions Act), California Welfare and Institutions Code (WIC) section 16118(d) and WIC section 16132 require counties to reinvest savings resulting from application of the de-link on new or expanded foster care and adoption services programs. Prior to 2011 Realignment, the AAP de-link savings were reinvested statewide. Post-realignment, the non-federal portion of the savings was allocated to counties as part of the realignment base. As a result, the savings realized are reflected as LRF and county funds. The de-link savings must be spent within two years of when they were earned and cannot be used to supplant existing program expenditures. If savings are not reinvested within two years, the counties must provide an explanation and a detailed plan including timelines for reinvesting these savings. PL 112-34 (Child and Family Services Improvement and Innovation Act) further clarifies that beginning with federal fiscal year 2011, Title IV-E agencies must document how the de-link savings (if any) are reinvested. These changes were codified in California Senate Bill (SB) 1013 (Chapter 35, Statutes of 2012).

Each county is responsible for reinvesting and reporting the savings to CDSS. CDSS is responsible for annually reporting to the federal Administration for Children and Families (ACF), both the pre- and post-realignment savings, reinvestment amounts and a narrative on what the funds were spent on for the post-realignment savings. Therefore, counties are responsible for submitting and maintaining documentation that reflects the amount of savings reinvested and the type and nature of services funded. See ALL COUNTY FISCAL LETTER NO. 16/17-74

9 Supporting and Preserving Adoptive Families – Profiles of Publicly Funded Post Adoption Services (2014); Donaldson Adoption Institute. Reviews how adoptions not only benefit children but also result in reduced financial and social costs to child welfare systems, governments and communities, and shows how for more than three decades, the U.S. Government has focused considerable effort and funding on promoting adoptions from foster care, resulting in huge increases in the number of children adopted in the 10 most recent years – from an estimated 211,000 in FY 1988–1997 to 524,496 in the most 10 recent years, FY 2003–2012 (Maza, 1999; USDHHS, 2013).

10 Funding Youth Permanency – A County Guide; Families NOW. This guide helps users understand how to calculate the fiscal savings achieved by moving children and youth from foster care into permanent adoptive and legal guardian families. It is also useful in calculating the cost to the child welfare system when adoptions and guardianships fail and the youth returns to foster care. https://www.sierrahealth.org/assets/Funding_Youth_Permanency_Guide_June_2015.pdf

Community Mental Health Care Agencies, Managed Care Organizations and Fee-for-Service Providers

This self-assessment is intended to serve as a tool to:

- Assist community mental health agencies, managed care organizations and fee-for-service providers to review their ability to best serve the mental health needs of adoption and guardianship children, youth and families;
- Ensure that their staff and contracted providers have specialized training and experience in adoption and permanency clinical issues;
- Help staff and managers identify opportunities for program improvement, assist in professional development, and inform organizational policy change.

TIP SHEET FOR BEHAVIORAL AND MENTAL HEALTH PROVIDERS

TIP #1

Be aware that clinical training programs and graduate education programs typically do not include coursework covering adoption and permanency clinical issues.

- Encourage staff and contracted clinicians to participate in training focused on the unique needs of adoptive and guardianship children, youth and families.
- Explore partnering with local child welfare agencies to provide joint trainings for clinicians and child welfare professionals regarding the mental health needs of adoptive and guardianship children, youth and families.
- Inform staff that Federal IV-E Training programs allow clinicians and others outside the public child welfare system to participate in specialized trainings that support the needs of children and families involved in the child welfare system.

TIP #2

Recent law requires adoptive and guardianship parents to be informed of the unique mental health needs their children and youth may face and are advised to seek out providers who have expertise in adoption/permanency clinical issues.

- Become familiar with information provided to these families and disseminate information to your staff and providers.¹

TIP #3

Complete a self-assessment in order to be prepared to best serve these children, youth and families.

- Identify adoption-competent staff within your agency or network.
- Identify and meet the training needs of your staff.
- Ensure that your agency's screening and assessment tools ask questions to families about their experiences with foster care, adoption and/or legal guardianship. This is essential to best match these families with clinicians with competency and expertise in meeting their needs.

TIP #4

Be aware that children adopted or in guardianship from foster care continue their Medi-Cal eligibility.

TIP #5

Be aware that Medi-Cal Managed Care Plans and Fee-for-Service providers must provide medically necessary mental health benefits for those children/beneficiaries who do not meet medical necessity criteria for Specialty Mental Health Services (SMHS).

- The following additional mental health services that do not meet SMHS medical necessity criteria are covered by Medi-Cal Managed Care Plans and in the Fee-for-Service (FFS) Medi-Cal program for beneficiaries with a mental health disorder as defined by the current Diagnostic and Statistical Manual (DSM):
 - Individual and group mental health evaluation and treatment (psychotherapy);
 - Psychological testing, when clinically indicated, to evaluate a mental health condition;
 - Outpatient services for the purposes of monitoring drug therapy;
 - Psychiatric consultation; and
 - Outpatient laboratory, drugs, supplies and supplements (excluding medications as described in the Medi-Cal Provider Manual and All Plan Letter (APL) 13-021).
- Be aware that there is some overlap in the types of services provided by the Medi-Cal Managed Care organizations and fee-for-service providers and County Mental Health Plans.

TIP #6

Be aware that County Mental Health Plans (MHP) must provide specialty mental health services to all Medi-Cal eligible children and youth who meet SMHS medical necessity criteria under EPSDT regardless of their level of impairment (mild, moderate or severe).

- DHCS recognizes that the medical necessity criteria for impairment and intervention for Medi-Cal SMHS differ between children and adults.
- Under EPSDT the “impairment” criteria component of SMHS medical necessity is less stringent for children and youth than it is for adults, therefore children with low levels of impairment may meet medical necessity criteria for SMHS (Cal. Code Regs., tit.9, chapter 11, §1830.205 and § 1830.210)
- To receive SMHS, Medi-Cal children and youth must:
 - Have a covered diagnosis;²
 - Have at least one of the listed impairments³ as a result of the covered mental health diagnosis; and
 - Meet the specified intervention criteria.⁴

1 As this guide goes to print, CDSS is developing a brochure to fill the mandated requirement regarding written information to be provided to adoptive and guardianship parents. To request information on the availability of the brochure, email apu@dss.ca.gov.

2 Diagnoses covered:

- Pervasive Developmental Disorders, except Autistic Disorders
- Disruptive Behavior and Attention Deficit Disorders
- Feeding and Eating Disorders of Infancy and Early Childhood
- Elimination Disorders
- Other Disorders of Infancy, Childhood or Adolescence
- Schizophrenia and other Psychotic Disorders, except Psychotic Disorders due to a General Medical Condition
- Mood Disorders, except Mood Disorders due to a General Medical Condition
- Anxiety Disorders, except Anxiety Disorders due to a General Medical Condition
- Somatoform Disorders
- Factitious Disorders
- Dissociative Disorders
- Paraphilias
- Gender Identity Disorder
- Eating Disorders
- Impulse Control Disorders Not Elsewhere Classified
- Adjustment Disorders
- Personality Disorders, excluding Antisocial Personality Disorder
- Medication-Induced Movement Disorders related to other included diagnoses.

3 Listed impairments

- A significant impairment in an important area of life functioning.
- A reasonable probability of significant deterioration in an important area of life functioning.
- Except as provided in Section 1830.210, a reasonable probability a child will not progress developmentally as individually appropriate.
- For the purpose of this Section, a child is a person under the age of 21 years.

4 Specified intervention criteria

- The focus of the proposed intervention is to address the identified impairment listed in endnote #3.
- The expectation is that the proposed intervention will:
 - Significantly diminish the impairment, or
 - Prevent significant deterioration in an important area of life functioning, or
 - Except as provided in Section 1830.210, allow the child to progress developmentally as individually appropriate.
- The condition would not be responsive to physical health care-based treatment.

SAMPLE SURVEY MONKEY QUESTIONNAIRE

Community Mental Health, Medi-Cal Managed Care, and Fee-for Service Provider Questionnaire

For use by Community Mental Health Agencies and Medi-Cal Managed Care organizations to determine adoption competence of contract specialty mental health providers.

Adoption Competency Training

ACT – An Adoption and Permanency Curriculum for Child Welfare and Mental Health Professionals; Kinship Center Educational Institute; A post-graduate permanency curriculum that provides intensive practice and clinically informed training to adoption and permanency professionals and community-based therapists. The curriculum expands the application of techniques and knowledge from related fields, such as education, mental health, and neurobiology to the practice of adoption and relative guardianship. ACT is designed to advance and inform adoption practice, expand the pool of qualified child welfare and mental health providers available to families, integrate permanency practice across an array of programs, and engage and retain qualified professional staff in adoption and post-permanency services. ACT transmits core competencies to individual professionals and to agency staff groups seeking to improve and standardize their programs with shared, quality knowledge and a commitment to integrated practice principles.

Adoption Competency Training; North American Council on Adoptable Children (NACAC); Developed in adherence to NACAC's national best practice advisory committee's identified goals and objectives, helps mental health practitioners and child welfare workers understand the importance of building skills and knowledge related to working with adoptive families. This training emphasizes family strengths to ensure clinical practices are family based and value all members of the adoption triad. Providers (including parent mentors, school personnel, community support workers, pastoral counselors, and mental health workers) who work with adoptive families will benefit from the opportunity to build their skills, knowledge, empathy, and understanding of this journey, as they learn to seek resources in their home states and counties that can also meet families' needs.

NTI (National Adoption Competency Mental Health Training Initiative) (2018); free online training designed to enhance the capacity of child welfare professionals and mental health practitioners to understand and effectively address the mental health and other complex needs of children and adolescents moving to permanency through adoption or guardianship, or already in adoptive or guardianship placements. NTI will provide professionals in all States, Tribes and Territories access to two free, state of the art, evidence-informed, standardized web-based trainings to provide the casework and clinical practices to promote permanency, child well-being and family stability. The training for child welfare professionals is a 20-hour training with an additional 3 hours for child welfare supervisors, along with a downloadable Supervisor Coaching and Activity Guide. The training for mental health professionals is a 25-hour curriculum with coaching sessions offered during the pilot. Through 2018 trainings are only available in pilot sites, including California, and will be available nationally beginning in 2019. NTI is funded through the Department of Health and Human Services, Administration for Children and Families, Children's Bureau, Cooperative Agreement #90CO1121.

Understanding the Need for Adoption Competent Mental Health Services

Adoption-Competent Therapy Vs. Regular Therapy; What Is the Difference? Holt International – Post Adoption Service Blog; Discusses some common misunderstandings or misdiagnoses that adopted children encounter in the mental/behavioral health profession. The article includes observations on how adopted children – of all ages – are at risk for changes in their brain's chemistry and structure. These alterations don't just go away with time and, if not effectively treated, can become increasingly problematic as a child grows older. A generalist therapist may conclude that the child is untreatable. Or the parents may repeatedly change therapists, keeping up hope that this next therapist will have the magic cure. This cycle of dashed hopes brings everyone down.

Adoption Competency in Clinical Social Work (2013); Deborah H. Siegel, PhD, LICSW, DCSW, ACSW, Social Work Today Vol. 13 No. 6 P. 16; Discusses how lack of training in adoption competency leaves social workers at risk for overlooking or possibly mismanaging key issues faced by adoptive and guardianship families, adding to the distress of the clients they want to help. The article also highlights the values, knowledge and skills, and societal context which help define adoption competence.

A Need to Know: Enhancing Adoption Competence among Mental Health Professionals; Donaldson Adoption Institute; Brodzinsky, D. (2011); This report seeks to raise the level of awareness among mental health professionals about the nature and importance of adoption clinical competence, heighten their desire to receive such training, and identify various means by which the relevant knowledge and skills can be obtained. It addresses the fact that for a variety of reasons, mental health professionals typically do not receive the training required to fill adoption-related counseling needs and, too often, either do not fully understand why such training is necessary or mistakenly believe the knowledge they already have is sufficient.

FINDING AN ADOPTION-COMPETENT THERAPIST

Parenting any child, born to you or not, brings challenges. Children can be wonderfully creative in their choices of behaviors to test your limits, try to have things go their way, or protect themselves when they do not feel safe. When those behaviors are troubling, you may wonder if it is normal childhood development for a child that age, or something related to their adoption or guardianship. The time may come when you decide to seek help from a mental health professional. Here are some things you should keep in mind when you do:

- Members of adoptive and guardianship families may need professional help when concerns arise. Adoption-competent professionals often can prevent concerns from becoming more serious problems.
- Not all therapists are trained to deal with the needs of adoptive and guardianship families. In fact, most therapists do not receive adoption clinical training as part of their standard curriculum.
- Children adopted from foster care are a vulnerable population. When mental health needs and challenges inherent in adoption or guardianship are left unaddressed, these unmet and misunderstood mental health needs are likely to derail normal child development.
- Challenging behaviors can be a child's way of communicating. They may be telling us something, responding to triggers that send them back to their days of trauma, neglect and abuse. They may be trying to control their environments because they don't believe they will be safe if they do not.
- Adoptive families, including those who adopted years ago and those who have built their families more recently form a large chorus crying out for access to mental health professionals who understand their unique issues.
- Asking for help when needed is a strength, not a weakness.

"As foster and adoptive parents, we are told repeatedly that it is crucial for our children to go to therapy. It can, indeed, be an incredibly helpful tool...if it is guided by an adoption-competent therapist in a model that includes the parents. The attachment-savvy therapist understands that the family is the healing agent and the parent-child relationship is a priority. With the right therapist, we can have access to more help than ever before.

Therapy is not about "fixing" the child. Therapists trained in adoption and permanency know that it is about building on the strengths of the people in that child's world, sharing ways in which we can weave attachment-building moments into our everyday interactions. It's about strengthening relationships, honoring connections and equipping the family for its journey toward healing."

QUESTIONS TO EXPLORE WITH POTENTIAL THERAPISTS FOR YOUR ADOPTION OR GUARDIANSHIP FAMILY

1. What training have you received on working with adoptive and guardianship families to help them address adoption and permanency clinical issues? What have you learned from those trainings?
2. What is your experience with adoption and adoption issues? (Be specific about the adoption issues, such as open adoption, transracial adoption, grief and loss, searching for birth relatives, abuse or institutionalization history, or attachment difficulties.)
3. What are some of the important, but different, issues for children adopted as newborns and those placed later?
4. Have you ever worked with children who were not infants at the time of their adoption, or with children who were in foster care?
5. What percentage of your clients are adoptive or guardianship families? (ideally 1/3 or more)
6. Do you see the child individually or in a family therapy model? (Look for a therapist who understands the importance of using a family therapy model, especially in the first session.)
7. How do you include the parents/caregivers in therapy?
8. How do you address behavioral concerns? (Avoid therapists who recommend punitive measures, including loss-based discipline – time-out alone, etc.)
9. Do you have experience working with international and trans-racial adoptees? (if applicable)
10. Do you attend conferences related to adoption needs and concerns? (Some good ones are held by the American Adoption Congress, Child Welfare League of America and North American Council on Adoptive Children.)
11. What are your thoughts on open versus closed adoption? (Should favor open across the board with the exception of very contentious situations.)
12. Do you know of any local support groups for adoptive parents, adoptees or birth parents?
13. Are you a licensed mental health professional or being supervised by a licensed mental health professional?
14. How long have you been in practice, and what degrees, licenses or certifications do you have?
15. Notice if they ask probing questions when you tell them you are an adoptive or guardianship family.
16. Find out what they understand about implicit/pre-verbal memory.
17. Notice if they make negative comments about the family of origin or country of origin.

TIP #1

Understand the unique developmental needs of children and youth who have experienced trauma and loss, so you can be prepared to address your child's needs as they arise.

TIP #2

Be open with your child or youth as soon as possible, at their developmental level, about adoption and guardianship, and support them to express feelings about their own story. Understand that examining and talking about their story is an ongoing process that they may revisit at different developmental stages, page ??

TIP #3

Examine your own beliefs about asking for help as you begin the process of building your family.

TIP #4

When you are ready to seek out a mental health professional, select one with specialized training and experience in adoption and permanency clinical issues. Ask your agency's post-permanency support staff for referrals.

TIP #5

Know that you are not alone, and not the only family to face challenges. Build a network of support with family and friends and include other adoptive and guardianship families in your network.

TIP #6

Advocate for your child and family with their teachers and coaches. Educate the educators about the diversity of families they serve, so that adoption and guardianship youth do not feel invisible or discriminated against in school settings.

TIP #7

Children who experience traumatic or stressful events may exhibit challenging behavior. This can be hard for you, of course, and can be particularly tough when you and your child are in social situations. It may be helpful to let those close to you know that the child is going through a stressful and traumatic time so they can join you in being supportive and non-judgmental even in the face of challenging behavior.

TIPS FOR PARENTS PARENTING AFTER FOSTER CARE: ADDRESSING YOUR CHILD'S MENTAL HEALTH NEEDS

Parents who have adopted or become legal guardians of a child or youth from foster care may find themselves unprepared to manage their child's or youth's mental health needs. Any training they may have received related to the trauma and loss experienced by children in foster care often becomes a distant memory. Once permanency has been established, they no longer have a case manager to consult with. This can leave parents feeling isolated and alone when facing challenges. Many families are unaware of the post-permanency services offered by the child welfare or adoption agency that facilitated their adoption or guardianship or provides their adoption or Kin-Gap subsidy. Others may be hesitant to admit they are in need of help.

Sadly, to many parents in our society, the idea of seeking help for themselves, their child or their family is a sign of weakness. For adoptive parents and guardians, this belief may be even more common. As part of the fostering, adoption and guardianship process, families must go through an initial assessment. Some may feel that they had to 'prove themselves' to be good enough to become a parent. When a child or youth is struggling, some believe that it's their fault...or that their child's problems may indicate some deficit in their parenting abilities. It is common for parents to experience feelings of embarrassment, shame or inadequacy. It's important for families to know that they are not the only ones who face these challenges and that there is strength in knowing when to ask for help.

Reluctance to request help from a post-permanency child welfare worker, or to decide to seek therapy or counseling, may be difficult to overcome. It's helpful to examine feelings you may have around asking for help as you embark on the journey of parenting. Examine your attitudes around the possibility of needing help before you need it!

Understand that your child's or youth's earlier experiences can lead to future challenges for them at different developmental stages. It's important to recognize that there are some skills that professionals have that most average folks just don't have. We readily seek professional help when our washing machine breaks down. When we have a leaky pipe we call a plumber. We seek out a mechanic when our car breaks down if we can't fix it ourselves. There's no shame in getting help when it comes to home repairs or fixing an appliance. And, we go to the doctor when we are sick or hurt beyond a cold, cough or minor injury. But somehow in our society, many of us have taken on the belief that if our spirits or minds are hurting, there's shame in seeking help.

TIPS FOR PARENTS DEBUNKING MYTHS ABOUT ADOPTED CHILDREN/YOUTH AND FAMILIES

Not all adoptees are troubled. Recent long-term studies of adoptees in America show that they are no different in emotional health, psychological well-being, self-esteem and attachment to family as children raised by their biological parents.

Adoptive Families: The Top Ten Myths about Adoption

<https://www.adoptivefamilies.com/how-to-adopt/myths-about-adoption/>

Not all children from foster care have special needs, are violent or are troubled.

While many children in foster care do indeed have some special needs that must be addressed, it doesn't mean they are troubled or violent. These children have experienced a terrible loss and sometimes a traumatic early life. They are strong and capable of healing. They may test boundaries, push buttons, need time, extra love and support, or even medical, therapeutic or educational assistance, but it is not something that should keep you from considering adoption from foster care. Education is your best defense and preventative measure in succeeding in this type of adoption!

HELPING CHILDREN AND YOUTH WITH GRIEF AND LOSS

Common Themes:

- Grief
- Loyalty
- Rejection
- Fear of Abandonment
- Trust
- Identity
- Self-esteem

Children who have suffered a loss through death, divorce, foster care, adoption or other separations seem to share several common issues. However, each child will react or respond to the loss dependent upon:

1. The significance of the loss
2. Whether the loss is temporary or permanent
3. Inherent coping abilities of the child
4. Availability of supports
5. Age and cognitive abilities of the child (at the time of loss and at the present time)

Consequently, while some children may react in extreme ways, others may respond mildly or not at all. In addition, while one child may be affected in the area of loyalty, for example, another may be preoccupied with identity issues.

TIPS FOR PARENTS

CONTINUUM OF DEVELOPMENT OF ADOPTED CHILDREN

Adapted from Ohio Child Welfare Training Program from a handout developed by Parenthesis Family Advocates, Columbus, Ohio

0-3 Years	3-7 Years	8-12 Years	12-16 Years	16-19 Years
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Adopted child does not realize difference between themselves and non-adopted children. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Child asks a lot of questions. • Loves to hear his/her adoption story. • Can repeat it verbatim but has little understanding of the concepts. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Child understands concept of adoption. • Begins grieving process. • May stop asking questions as part of denial. • Realizes that he/she had to lose something to be adopted. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Child enters anger stage of grieving. • May resist authority and try on new identities. • May be angry over loss of control in his/her life. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Youth may be depressed and over-react to losses. • May be anxious about growing up and leaving home.
STRATEGIES FOR PARENTS
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Collect as much concrete information as possible (goodbye letters from birthparents and pictures are helpful). • Develop a "Life Book" for child, including these concrete bits of information. • Begin talking comfortably and positively with your infant, family and friends about adoption. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Encourage questions and answer honestly. • Difficult issues may be omitted (but never changed) until child is older. • Tell their Adoption Story as a favorite bedtime story. • Use and add to their Life Book. • Reassure your child that he/she will not lose their adoptive family. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Don't force your child to discuss issues but let him/her know you are open and comfortable when he/she is ready. • Let your child know it is understood that he/she can love both sets of parents. He/she does not have to choose. • Ask if your child has questions or feelings he/she would like to discuss. • Let your child know you are not threatened or angry about questions regarding birth family and/or past history. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Allow your child to exercise control whenever possible. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Provide opportunities for decision-making. • Help your child access and accept his/her birth information. • Try to keep from responding to child's anger with more anger. Understand that much of his anger is directed at the birthparent. • Be firm in limit-setting. Establish preset consequences for broken rules. Allow child to experience natural consequences of behavior. • Continue to let child know that you love him/her no matter what. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Let child know he/she may remain at home after graduation if he/she chooses. • Be alert for sadness when relationships with peers fail or during anniversary reactions such as birthdays or Mother's Day. • Continue to keep adoption topic open within the home. • Provide supportive opportunities for independence and freedom.

TIP SHEET FOR ADOPTED YOUTH AND THOSE IN GUARDIANSHIPS

TIP #1

If you were in foster care, you likely experienced trauma and loss.

- Know that you're not alone, or the only one to face challenges.
- Feelings around your experiences may come up for you at different times.
- Trauma and loss can make it difficult to maintain close relationships.
- It's important to have someone safe to talk to when these feelings come up.

TIP #2

Dealing with your experiences and feelings is a process and a journey that may reveal itself to you in different ways and at different times throughout your life.

- Looking at your experiences is not a one-time deal.
- Working through your feelings is an ongoing process.
- Research on how our brains work has led to new understanding and hope that we can heal from trauma and loss.

TIP #3

Asking for help is difficult for most people.

- Everyone needs help sometimes, and the best way to get it is to ask!
- It's important to look to people who you know care about you.
- People can become numb to their emotional pain or feel hopeless so they don't seek help. Don't let this happen to you.

TIP #4

Asking for help for yourself when needed is a valuable strength to have in life.

- Some people go their whole life without learning this!
- It may make you feel vulnerable or fear being seen as weak, but asking for help is a sign of strength and a way to get you what you need.
- It's okay to ask for help

TIP #5

We must challenge and debunk the stigma and shame in our society around seeking help for mental health issues.

- More and more people are talking about this. There is a national movement to debunk this myth.
- In our society, many of us have taken on the belief that if our spirits or minds are hurting, there's shame in seeking help. This is just not true.
- There's no more shame in getting professional help when our hearts and minds hurt than in getting help when it comes to home repairs or fixing an appliance, or going to the doctor when sick or hurt in other parts of your body.

TIP SHEET FOR ADOPTED YOUTH AND THOSE IN GUARDIANSHIPS

TIP #6

It's wise to ask for help before things get too hard.

- Ignoring painful feelings doesn't make them go away, and often negatively impacts our behavior and relationships.
- Pain can get worse if not dealt with.

TIP #7

Talk about your feelings!

- Sharing what you're going through with a family member or friend can make you feel less alone and help you process your experiences.
- Understand that while examining and talking about your experiences may be difficult, it is better to do so than to keep your feelings in and stay silent.

TIP #8

Sometimes we need more help than a friend or parent can offer. When you look for professional help, it's important to seek out a therapist with specialized training and experience in adoption and permanency issues.

- Being adopted or in a guardianship after foster care brings up unique concerns that not all mental health providers are trained to understand.
- Public and private child welfare and adoption agencies can refer you to a therapist with the necessary training and experience.

TIP #9

Take action!

- Join or build a network of support with other former foster youth, adopted and guardianship youth.
- Become an advocate in school and in your community to debunk the stigma against seeking mental health care.
- Educate others to recognize the diverse families that live among us.
- Speak out about the need for adoption-competent clinicians in your community.
- Replace the stigma and empower others.
