AB 1790 Implementation Guide and Toolkit
for Private Nonprofit Child Welfare Agencies
Recommendations to Remove Barriers to Accessing Adoption-Competent Mental Health Professionals

Prepared by Families NOW with funding from Sierra Health Foundation, Walter S. Johnson Foundation,
California Department of Social Services, Stensrud Foundation, Roseann Mattern,
Doupnik Family and California Association of Adoption Agencies

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This guide and toolkit could not have been completed without time and resources from a broad array of stakeholders united in their concern that adoption and permanency-competent mental health services are available to all families making a lifelong commitment to parent children in foster care.

We offer respectful gratitude to former Assemblymember Roger Dickinson for recognizing the importance of carrying and passing AB 1790 to increase availability of and access to mental health professionals with specialized training and experience in adoption and permanency clinical issues. Special thanks also goes to Les Spahn, Assemblymember Dickinson's legislative director who worked with us to get the bill passed.

Kathy Van Osten deserves special recognition for her pro bono legislative consultant support. She is our hero.

The following funders made this project possible. Our deep appreciation goes out to them:

- Sierra Health Foundation for core funding and publishing support
- Walter S. Johnson Foundation for core funding
- California Department of Social Services for core funding
- Roseann Mattern for printing and ongoing support
- Stensrud Foundation for printing and ongoing support
- Doupnik Family for printing and ongoing support
- California Association of Adoption Agencies for co-sponsoring the bill and financial support

Credit for the richness of the recommendations you will find in this guide belongs to the members of the AB 1790 Stakeholders Group. We thank them for their time and expertise as they took on the task of identifying the barriers that prevent adoptive and other permanency families from accessing adoption-competent mental health services. The recommendations they offer for removing the barriers are thoughtful, insightful and appropriately targeted. For a complete list of the Stakeholders Group, see the inside back cover of this guide.

Thanks too to Debbie Riley, Center for Adoption Support & Education (C.A.S.E.) for her leadership in making adoption-competency mental health training accessible. Special appreciation to CBHDA and Bill Arroyo for adding expertise and support to the project, Jeff Rackmil, Alameda County Behavioral Health Care Services, for his time and thoughtful input as we developed the sample Survey Monkey questionnaire, and to Kim Medina for help developing the Tip Sheets you will find in the guide.

Special thanks go to my key "go to" experts Richard Knecht, Lynn Thull, Mike Schertell and Valerie Earley.

MEETING THE MENTAL HEALTH NEEDS OF ADOPTIVE AND GUARDIANSHIP CHILDREN, YOUTH AND FAMILIES

WHY IT MATTERS

Belonging to a committed permanent family can create the best environment for healing from a history of trauma and loss. But simply joining a permanent family is often not sufficient to compensate for a child's adverse childhood experiences (ACEs). At different developmental ages and stages, youth can re-experience or process trauma differently. Services may be necessary to help youth understand their past histories and to reconcile emotions related to adoption or guardianship.

Some families will need or want professional help when these concerns arise. Working with a mental health professional who does not understand adoption and permanency clinical issues can result in ineffective or even damaging treatment. Rather than getting the help needed, many adoptive parents and guardians are misunderstood, even blamed for their child's challenges, leaving the family in more difficulty than when they arrived.

Likewise, many children feel misunderstood just like the parents. They are often blamed for behaviors that have protected them from harm at other stages of their lives, rather than being helped to understand and integrate their past histories, to process emotions related to adoption or guardianship, and learn new, and developmentally appropriate ways to heal past traumas. The simple act of helping families understand their children's perspectives is critically important.

LEGISLATIVE IMPERATIVE: AB 1790 (2014 – DICKINSON)

This Guide and Toolkit offers tools and tips to assist agencies and mental health professionals implement recommendations made by the AB 1790 Stakeholder Group on how to remove barriers to the provision of mental health services by adoption-competent professionals. The recommendations are grounded in the guidance found in California's Integrated Core Practice Model.

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE AND TOOLKIT

Terminology

Because the needs of adoptive and guardianship families overlap so closely, throughout this guide, the terms "adoption" and "adoption-competent" should be understood to encompass "guardianship" and "guardianship-competent."

Recommendations

The recommendations are grouped in categories, ranging from creating procedures to support adoption and permanency-informed practice, training and skill building for staff, and maximizing funding options.

- Consider a first read-through with an eye to low-hanging-fruit implementation items.

Self-Assessment Tool

This tool is designed to help you measure your organization against the AB 1790 Stakeholder recommendations. It can help staff and leaders identify opportunities for program improvement, assist in professional development, and inform organizational policy change.

- Consider recruiting a staff taskforce to complete the self-assessment, including comments and recommendations for actions to be taken.
- Build an action plan and timeline to implement prioritized recommendations.

Tip Sheets

Each guide has a tip sheet for the particular sector, as well as reproducible tip sheets to share with adoptive and guardianship parents and youth. These are designed to aid your process to meet the mental health needs of families.

DEFINITION: ADOPTION-COMPETENT CHILD-SERVING PROFESSIONAL (See Endnotes on page 5)

The National Adoption Competency Mental Health Training Initiative (2018)

An Adoption Competent Child-Serving Professional...

Values the role of parents as healing agents for their children, using practices that mitigate harm from trauma, prevent re-traumatization, recognize and preserve connections, promote healing, foster healthy identity, and build strengths and resilience.

Understands the nature of adoption as a form of family formation; the common developmental challenges in adoption or guardianship; the mental health issues that are associated with early adverse experiences; the importance of maintaining connection with siblings, kin, community and culture.

Applies trauma-informed, attachment-based casework or clinical skills and effectively utilizes skills to help children understand their past experiences, facilitate healing from loss, and build culturally appropriate practices that promote healthy identity formation and addresses issues of race, culture, and diversity in adoptive and guardianship families; providing full disclosure, preparation, planning and support for families to provide the healing environment for their children; and assisting parents in using therapeutic parenting strategies.

Responds to current trends and research, actively engages in ongoing professional development, and commits to utilizing evidence-informed and trauma-sensitive practices.

“You simply cannot expect a child to attach to a new family when he/she has not faced and healed from the grief and loss of not being a part of his/her birth family.”

— Debbie Riley,
Center for Adoption Support and Education

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR MEETING THE MENTAL HEALTH NEEDS OF ADOPTIVE AND GUARDIANSHIP FAMILIES

Private Nonprofit Child Welfare Agencies

TRAINING AND SKILL BUILDING FOR STAFF

- Ensure that all staff receive training on permanency options for children and youth, including psycho-social and legal issues¹; provide updated training as needed; provide staff with written materials on these options and issues to routinely share with families;
- Allocate time for all case-carrying staff and supervisors to complete the NTI adoption competency child welfare training (free 20-hour online training)²; strongly encourage or require staff to participate;
- Require NTI or other adoption competency training³ for all adoption staff and staff serving children with a permanency plan for adoption, guardianship, or APPLA;
- Provide all child welfare staff with written materials required by WIC 371 and WIC 16119 regarding the mental health needs of children with histories of trauma, separation and loss, and the importance of adoptive and guardianship families working with adoption-competent clinicians if the need for mental health services arises.⁴ (See Handouts – Finding an Adoption-Competent Therapist, page 27.)

INITIAL PREPARATION AND TRAINING FOR ADOPTIVE AND GUARDIANSHIP FAMILIES

- Require pre-permanency training in adoption and permanency clinical issues for families planning to adopt or take guardianship of a child in their care (in addition to initial Resource Family Training);
- Provide trauma-informed parenting training to all resource families⁵;
- Inform all prospective adoptive and guardianship families of Adoption Assistance and Kin-Gap regulations related to a child's Social Security income (page 35).

ONGOING TRAINING AND SUPPORT FOR ADOPTIVE AND GUARDIANSHIP FAMILIES

- Have adoption-competent staff and/or community partners available to adoptive and guardianship families and youth to provide support and services before and after permanency⁶;
- Develop in-house adoption-competent clinical services;

- Provide adoption-competent resource and referral services to adoptive and guardianship families upon request, and other support when needed, including information regarding children's educational needs, childcare, and juvenile court processes;
- Provide post-permanency training for adoptive and guardianship families, including training for older children and youth;
- Provide ongoing support groups for adoptive and guardianship parents, children and youth;
- Maintain a current list of local adoption-competent therapists; share with families; post and update on Centralized Post Permanency Resource Site (www.cakidsconnection.org/PostAdoption)⁷; agencies in the Sacramento and Chico areas also post on Post Adoption Link (www.postadoptionlink.org)⁸;
- Assist families in building a post-permanency support team (identifying individuals, natural supports, and recreational activities that can provide relief and support for all family members);
- Plan special activities for adoptive and guardianship families (such as Family Fun Night, Parents' Night Out, picnics, and other recreational activities);
- Provide ongoing support to adoptive and guardianship families through newsletters, web-site, blogs, etc. which might include phone and web-based services such as chat rooms, a lending library, and other educational opportunities⁹;
- Provide advocacy upon request to ensure the child's mental health needs are met in special education, regional center, and residential treatment settings;
- Refer post-permanency families to voluntary short-term case management services.

ADDRESS THE STIGMA OF SEEKING AND RECEIVING MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

- Provide training and/or information for families to explain the value of mental health services in dealing with trauma, loss, abuse and neglect issues;
- Stress to adoptive parents, guardians and youth that seeking mental health services is a sign of strength;

- Provide resource families with written information to help remove the stigma of seeking mental health services including:
 - Normalizing seeking support and help after permanency; makes Tip Sheet for Parents, page 30, and Tip Sheet for Adopted Youth and Those in Guardianship, page 38, available in your waiting room and directly to youth and families served;
 - The importance of working with clinicians with specialized training and experience in adoption/permanency clinical issues;
- Share web-based resources such as 9 Ways to Fight Mental Health Stigma (page 22).

PROMOTE AWARENESS OF NEED FOR ADOPTION-COMPETENT MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

- Inform your community of the importance of adoption-competent child welfare services;
- Provide literature to adoptive and guardianship family applicants regarding selecting and working with a therapist skilled in adoption and permanency clinical issues as required by WIC 371 and WIC 16119 (See end-note 4). Disseminate Finding an Adoption-Competent Therapist (page 27) or similar document;
- Include, in your newsletters, blogs and publications, articles regarding importance of adoptive and guardianship families working with therapists with specialized training and experience in adoption and permanency clinical issues.

ADDRESS THE LACK OF ACCESS TO ADOPTION-COMPETENT SERVICES

- Ensure that your programs meet the child welfare adoption competencies identified by the National Adoption Competency Mental Health Training Initiative (page 2)¹⁰;
- Partner with your county child welfare department to advocate to your county Mental Health Plan (MHP) and CA Dept of Health Care Services to assure access to adequate EPSDT and Medi-Cal Managed Care funds to provide needed adoption-competent mental health services;
- Promote availability of culturally competent mental health services within the pool of local providers with specialized training and experience in adoption and permanency clinical issues;
- If your agency provides mental health services as well as child welfare services, follow the recommendations included in the Guide and Toolkit for Community Mental Health Providers.

PARTNERSHIP WITH OTHER CHILD WELFARE & BEHAVIORAL HEALTH AGENCIES

- Build strong collaborative relationships with adoption-competent public and private child welfare agencies providing post-permanency services to adoptive and guardianship families;
- Build strong collaborative relationships with adoption-competent public and community mental health providers;
- Facilitate, or co-facilitate with adoption-competent public or private mental health and/or child welfare agencies, ongoing support groups for adoptive and guardianship families, children and youth.

COLLECT DATA

- Track: number of adoptive and guardianship families that request support and are referred to mental health services and other post-permanency services; what support and/or services were provided; and if services were provided by adoption-competent mental health providers;
- Track number of adoptive and guardianship children, youth and families that are receiving mental health and/or support services through your agency; include how many were served by adoption-competent clinicians;
- Create and distribute a survey to determine whether your own staff and that of any partner agencies providing post placement services to your adoptive and guardianship families:
 - Have an intake and assessment protocol that addresses adoption and permanency clinical issues;
 - Have staff with specialized training and experience in adoption/permanency clinical issues;
 - Address cultural issues and concerns of adoptive and guardianship families including families of color, single-parent families, LGBTQ families, and relative families;
 - See sample survey questionnaire (page 17).

MAXIMIZE FUNDING OPTIONS

- Encourage your county to use Title IV-E and/or IV-B training funds to provide quality, in-depth adoption competency child welfare and mental health training for partner private agency staff providing services to adoptive and guardianship families;
- Play an active role in your county MHSA stakeholder process to advocate for:
 - Use of MHSA Community Services and Supports, Prevention & Early Intervention, and Workforce Development funds to provide adoption-competent mental health services and training;

- Allocation of portion of MHSA funds at risk for reversion¹¹ to provide adoption-competency training to mental health providers;
- Funding for provision of adoption-competent services to sustain at-risk adoptive and guardianship families;
- Advocate for your county to utilize Adoption Assistance Program delink savings for post adoption services and training as required by federal law;¹²
- Make County Board of Supervisors aware of savings resulting from reduction in adoption disruptions due to increased access to and availability of adoption-competent mental health providers. Advocate for Board approval to reinvest those savings to further increase number of adoption-competent mental health providers;^{13, 14}
- For more information on funding, refer to Funding for Mental Health Services (page 18).

INTEGRATE WITH CORE PRACTICE MODEL¹⁵

- Deliver adoption and guardianship support services within Core Practice Model framework, integrating initial and ongoing engagement, assessment, service planning, delivery, coordination and care management, including monitoring and adapting services, and transitioning when care is completed;
- Coordinate access to services for members of adoptive and guardianship families in collaboration within highly integrated Systems of Care, where county partners share fiscal, personnel and technical resources;
- Assure that service professionals empower youth and family members through inclusive decision-making.

2 NTI – National Adoption Competency Mental Health Training Initiative is a free online training designed to enhance the capacity of child welfare professionals and mental health practitioners to understand and effectively address the mental health and other complex needs of children and adolescents moving to permanency through adoption or guardianship or already in adoptive or guardianship placements. NTI will provide professionals in all States, Tribes and Territories access to two free, state of the art, evidence-informed, standardized web-based trainings to provide the casework and clinical practices to promote permanency, child well-being and family stability. The training for child welfare professionals is a 20-hour training with an additional 3 hours for child welfare supervisors, along with a downloadable Supervisor Coaching and Activity Guide. The training for mental health professionals is a 25-hour curriculum with coaching sessions offered during the pilot. Though 2018 trainings are only available in pilot sites, including California, and will be available nationally beginning in 2019. For more information about accessing the NTI trainings, go to: www.adoptionsupport.org/nti. NTI is funded through the Department of Health and Human Services, Administration for Children and Families, Children's Bureau, Cooperative Agreement #90CO1121.

3 A number of trainings are available in California:

- ACT – An Adoption and Permanency Curriculum for Child Welfare and Mental Health Professionals
ACT is a post-graduate permanency curriculum that provides intensive practice and clinically informed training to adoption and permanency professionals and community-based therapists. The curriculum expands the application of techniques and knowledge from related fields, such as education, mental health, and neurobiology to the practice of adoption and relative guardianship. ACT is designed to advance and inform adoption practice, expand the pool of qualified child welfare and mental health providers available to adoptive and guardianship families, integrate permanency practice across an array of programs, and engage and retain qualified professional staff in adoption and post-permanency services. ACT transmits core competencies to individual professionals and to agency staff groups seeking to improve and standardize their programs with shared, quality knowledge and a commitment to integrated practice principles.
<http://www.kinshipcenter.org/education-institute/classes/professional-classes.html>

- TAC – Training for Adoption Competency
TAC is a post-Master's curriculum designed by Center for Adoption Support and Education (C.A.S.E.) with the assistance of a National Advisory Board of adoption experts. Through classroom and remote instruction as well as clinical case consultation, TAC students master 18 areas of knowledge, values and skills that are critical to adoption-competent mental health services. <http://adoptionsupport.org/adoption-competency-initiatives/training-for-adoption-competency-tac/>
- Adoption Competency Training – North American Council on Adoptable Children (NACAC)
This in-depth training, developed in adherence to NACAC's national best practice advisory committee's identified goals and objectives, helps mental health practitioners and child welfare workers understand the importance of building skills and knowledge related to working with adoptive and guardianship families. This training emphasizes family strength to ensure clinical practices are family based and value all members of the adoption triad. Providers (including parent mentors, school personnel, community support workers, pastoral counselors, and mental health workers) who work with adoptive and guardianship families will benefit from the opportunity to build their skills, knowledge, empathy, and understanding of this journey, as they learn to seek resources in their home states and counties that can also meet families' needs. <https://www.nacac.org/get-training/training-by-request/adoption-competency/>

4 AB 1006 (2017 – Maienschein)) amended CA WIC 371 and WIC 16119 to require adoptive and guardianship families to be given written information regarding the importance of working with mental health providers that have specialized adoption/permanency- clinical training and experience should their families need clinical support, and a description of the desirable clinical expertise the family should look for when choosing an adoption/permanency-competent mental health professional. The statutes require the information to be given at each of the following milestones in the journey to permanency:

- At the time of application for adoption of a child who is potentially eligible for AAP;
- When the court orders a child placed or adoption or has appointed a relative or nonrelative legal guardian;
- Immediately prior to finalization of the adoption decree.

See Finding an Adoption-Competent Therapist (page 27). As this guide goes to print, CDSS is developing a brochure to fill the mandated requirement regarding the written information. To request information on the availability of the brochure email apu@dss.ca.gov.

7 Centralized Post Adoption Resource Site – Funded by CDSS and managed by California Kids Connection (CKC); includes menu of ten categories of post-permanency resources. Whether a family is looking for summer camps, skilled therapists, or the latest information about SOGIE related developments, they may click on a topic and find a list of providers in or near their county of residence. If a family does not find the resource they were looking for, they may also contact our referral line by calling 1(800) KIDS-4US. This toll-free line connects families directly with CKC program staff to answer additional inquiries. Monolingual Spanish speaking families are also encouraged to call the referral line to speak with someone in Spanish. These community-based resources and services are updated often, so families should check back to get the most current information. <https://www.cakidsconnection.org/PostAdoption>

8 Post Adoption Link – Post Adoption Link is dedicated to helping Sacramento area adoptive families navigate post-adoption supports, resources and educational information related to the special needs of adoption. 11 Under the MHSA, funds are distributed to counties for local assistance, and must be spent for their authorized purpose within 3 years or revert to the state to be deposited into the fund and be available for other counties in future years. AB 114 (2017 Committee on Budget), includes language that will ensure that MHSA funds are being used to provide critical community mental health services. <http://www.counties.org/csac-bulletin-article/mental-health-services-act-issue-resolved-budget>

12 Federal PL 110-351 (Fostering Connections to Success and Increasing Adoptions Act) allows states to shift otherwise qualified non-federal AAP cases to Title IV-E eligible cases by de-linking the federal eligibility income requirements from Aid to Families with Dependent Children-Foster Care (AFDC-FC). A child defined by law as an “applicable child” no longer needs to meet the 1996 AFDC-FC income requirements to be eligible for Title IV-E funding. The de-link was applied to all new cases that were phased-in based on age groups. Currently, any AAP eligible child adopted at age 2 or above is now eligible for federal AAP.

To conform to PL 110-351, CA WIC section 16118(d) and WIC section 16132 require states to reinvest savings resulting from application of the de-link on new or expanded foster care and adoption services programs. Prior to 2011 Realignment, the AAP delink savings were reinvested statewide. Post-realignment, the non-federal portion of the savings was allocated to counties as part of the realignment base. As a result, the savings realized are reflected as LRF and county funds. The delink savings must be spent within two years of when they were earned and cannot be used to supplant existing program expenditures. If savings are not reinvested within two years, the counties must provide an explanation and a detailed plan including timelines for reinvesting these savings. PL 112-34 (Child and Family Services Improvement and Innovation Act) further clarifies that beginning with Federal Fiscal Year 2011, Title IV-E agencies must document how the delink savings (if any) are reinvested. These changes were codified in CA Senate Bill (SB) 1013 (Chapter 35, Statutes of 2012).

Each county is responsible for reinvesting and reporting the savings to CDSS. CDSS is responsible for annually reporting to the federal Administration for Children and Families (ACF), both the pre- and post-realignment savings, reinvestment amounts and a narrative on what the post-realignment savings funds were spent on. Therefore, counties are responsible for submitting and maintaining documentation that reflects the amount of savings reinvested and the type and nature of services funded. 13 Supporting and Preserving Adoptive Families – Profiles of Publicly Funded Post Adoption Services (2014); Donaldson Adoption Institute; Reviews how adoptions not only benefit children but also result in reduced financial and social costs to child welfare systems, governments and communities and shows how for over three decades, the U.S. government has focused considerable effort and funding on promoting adoptions from foster care, resulting in huge increases in the number of children adopted in the ten most recent years – from an estimated 211,000 in FY 1988-1997 to 524,496 in FY 2003-2012. (Maza, 1999; USDHHS, 2013).

14 Funding Youth Permanency – A County Guide; Families NOW; This guide helps users understand how to calculate the fiscal savings achieved by moving children and youth from foster care into permanent adoptive and legal guardian families. It is also useful in calculating the cost to the child welfare system when adoptions and guardianships fail and the youth returns to foster care.

“We sat in the waiting room as instructed while our daughter was in therapy, not knowing what was being discussed or how best to support her. We followed the suggested behavior plan of removing privileges. We were trying to be good parents. But our 6-year-old with low self-esteem became our 6-year-old who was suicidal. Her tantrums lasted for hours and her migraines lasted for days.

“Taking things away from a child who has already experienced the most primal loss of not being raised by the woman to whom she was born doesn’t lead to good behavior; it fuels her belief that she never deserved anything in the first place.

“When our family finally found professionals who had specialized training and a deep understanding of the complexities of adoption, the tears flowed and the healing began.”

– AB 1790 Testimony by Debbie Schugg, Adoptive Parent

SELF-ASSESSMENT TOOL

PRIVATE NONPROFIT CHILD WELFARE AGENCIES

This Agency Self-Assessment is intended to serve as a tool to assist private child welfare agencies in reviewing their organization's ability to provide a full range of adoption-competent pre- and post-permanency services to the children, youth and families that they serve, with a focus on their mental health needs. This tool can help staff and managers identify opportunities for program improvement, assist in professional development planning, and can be used to inform organizational policy change.

Training, Tools and Skill Building for Social Work Staff

The agency:		Yes	No	Do not know
1	Ensures that all staff, including supervisors, receive training on permanency options for children and youth, including psychosocial and legal issues; training updates are provided as needed; these materials are routinely shared with families.
	Comments / actions to be taken:
2	Allocates time for all case-carrying staff and supervisors to complete the NTI adoption-competency child welfare training (free 20-hour online training); strongly encourages or requires staff to participate.

TIP SHEET FOR PUBLIC AND PRIVATE CHILD WELFARE AGENCIES

TIP #1

Assess your organization's strengths and needs regarding talking with children, youth and families about difficult issues and experiences, including permanency options and feelings, and experiences in and out of foster care.

- All child welfare workers and social workers, regardless of their primary roles with children, youth and families, need to be trained to understand the permanency needs of the children and youth they serve.
- Being able to talk effectively about painful, challenging issues is more difficult for some child welfare workers than others. For some it comes naturally, however, for others it takes training and skill development to be able to talk effectively with children and youth at different developmental levels regarding their experiences, situations, options and plans. For some, it is also difficult to talk to parents about challenging issues. These skills are not commonly taught in social work school.

TIP #2

Support all child welfare social work staff, regardless of their role in the agency, to examine any biases they may have around adoption and permanency in general, and specifically any issues they may have around relative adoption.

- Recognize that we all bring our own biases and experiences to the work we do. Professionals have varying degrees of training, experience, skill and comfort working with children, youth and families on permanency planning when family reunification efforts are not successful. Support your staff to examine any biases they may have around permanency.
- Children and youth in foster care face unique challenges at different developmental stages regarding their experiences and losses. All child welfare staff, not only those working directly on permanency planning, need to be trained to be aware of the needs of these children and youth in order to effectively support them and the families who are caring for them, both pre- and post-permanency.
- The free online National Adoption Competency Mental Health Training Initiative (NTI) child welfare training offers a great opportunity to build awareness and skill in your workers. www.adoptionssupport.org/nti

TIP #3

Provide pre-permanency training that includes trauma-informed parenting techniques to potential adoptive and legal guardian families regarding the unique developmental needs of children and youth who have experienced trauma and loss to help prepare them to address their child's needs as they may arise.

- Pre-permanency training for families who are considering and/or planning for permanency is essential; it can inform and prepare families to be aware of the needs of their children and youth at different developmental stages, assist them to understand the challenges and issues that may arise, and prepare them to make skillful trauma-informed responses. Good preparation can help to sustain families and avoid potential disruption and harm.
- It is essential that parents considering permanency for children and youth in care receive specific adoption-competency training around their unique mental health needs. This will better prepare their families to grow into an independent family after finalizing their adoption or legal guardianship.
- Initial caregiver training is not enough, these families need to understand the long-term effects of trauma and loss and be supported to seek help from adoption-competent professionals when and if the need arises.

TIP #4

As part of the permanency planning process, public and private child welfare social workers must address with families the stigma they may experience around seeking help for mental health issues. All social workers need to assist families in examining their attitudes and beliefs around asking for help.

- The stigma around addressing mental health issues is currently in the spotlight across the country. Many national leaders are working to dispel myths and to help communities recognize that many of us face challenges at some point in our lives, both individually and within our families. Seeking help with mental health issues is crucial to well-being and should not be treated as shameful.
- Child welfare and private agency social work staff must be supported to recognize stigma that exists in our culture and to consider any personal biases they may hold around admitting to needing help or toward seeking help when needed.
- Child welfare and private agency social work staff need to be proactive in helping families they work with to understand that asking for help when needed is an important strength.

TIP #5

Build a network of adoption/permanency-competent community services by providing information and training to: county behavioral health departments, community mental health and health providers, educators, attorneys, and other community service providers.

- Raising awareness is always the first step.
- Public and private child welfare agencies need to take the lead on addressing barriers in our communities to accessing clinical professionals with experience and training on the unique mental health needs of children and youth in adoptive and guardianship families.
- By addressing barriers families may face when seeking help, agencies assist the families and youth they serve to obtain needed services and treatment.
- IV-E training funds permit training of mental health providers to support child welfare services.

TIP #6

Partner with public/private agencies to offer training to staff, providers and families.

- All families who are potential caregivers to children and youth in foster care need to receive the same level of training and support, whether they work with a public or private agency. Similarly, all child welfare and social work professionals need training to best serve their families and their children and youth. Sharing resources to make training available benefits the families and the agencies that serve them.

TIP #7

Work with your county Behavioral Health Care Agency to maintain a current database of adoption-competent mental health professionals, and provide to families prior to dismissal of dependency and, as needed, upon request.

- Surveying clinicians and agencies in the community regarding their experience and training on working with adoptive and guardianship children, youth and families is a necessary step to developing a current pool of professionals that are available to serve these families. (See sample survey questionnaire, page 17)
- Also encourage your county Behavioral Health Care Agency to survey their staff and contract providers regarding adoption competence.

TIP #8

Develop a strong post-permanency support program that provides families resources and information, ongoing training opportunities, support groups for parents, families and older youth, and social activities to help develop a network of support for adoptive/permanency families; also maintain a library of resource information for staff to share with adoptive/permanency families that speaks to their unique post-permanency needs.

- Families need a range of post-permanency support services. Child welfare agencies, both public and private, have a responsibility to help sustain and support the families they have helped to build. This includes the placing county, foster family agencies, adoption agencies, group homes, and short-term residential therapeutic programs.
- Consider collaborating with local partner agencies for shared post-adoption and post-guardianship support and services.

TIP #9

Provide families with information about Social Security disability benefits and how these benefits interface with AAP funding.

- Advise families that are caring for children or youth with severe mental health needs that they may apply for Social Security benefits, which, if higher than their Adoption Assistance Program (AAP) rate, may be available to supplement AAP and Kin-Gap funding.
- Advise families with youth who are eligible for both SSI funding and for AAP funding to age 21 to apply for SSI funding prior to their AAP ending on the youth's 21st birthday.
- See AAP/Kin-Gap and SSI/SSA Survivor Benefits, page 35.

Adoption Competency Training

ACT – An Adoption and Permanency Curriculum for Child Welfare and Mental Health Professionals; Kinship Center Educational Institute; A post-graduate permanency curriculum that provides intensive practice and clinically informed training to adoption and permanency professionals and community-based therapists. The curriculum expands the application of techniques and knowledge from related fields, such as education, mental health, and neurobiology to the practice of adoption and relative guardianship. ACT is designed to advance and inform adoption practice, expand the pool of qualified child welfare and mental health providers available to families, integrate permanency practice across an array of programs, and engage and retain qualified professional staff in adoption and post-permanency services. ACT transmits core competencies to individual professionals and to agency staff groups seeking to improve and standardize their programs with shared, quality knowledge and a commitment to integrated practice principles.

Adoption Competency Training; North American Council on Adoptable Children (NACAC); Developed in adherence to NACAC's national best practice advisory committee's identified goals and objectives, helps mental health practitioners and child welfare workers understand the importance of building skills and knowledge related to working with adoptive families. This training emphasizes family strengths to ensure clinical practices are family based and value all members of the adoption triad. Providers (including parent mentors, school personnel, community support workers, pastoral counselors, and mental health workers) who work with adoptive families will benefit from the opportunity to build their skills, knowledge, empathy, and understanding of this journey, as they learn to seek resources in their home states and counties that can also meet families' needs.

NTI (National Adoption Competency Mental Health Training Initiative) (2018); free online training designed to enhance the capacity of child welfare professionals and mental health practitioners to understand and effectively address the mental health and other complex needs of children and adolescents moving to permanency through adoption or guardianship, or already in adoptive or guardianship placements. NTI will provide professionals in all States, Tribes and Territories access to two free, state of the art, evidence-informed, standardized web-based trainings to provide the casework and clinical practices to promote permanency, child well-being and family stability. The training for child welfare professionals is a 20-hour training with an additional 3 hours for child welfare supervisors, along with a downloadable Supervisor Coaching and Activity Guide. The training for mental health professionals is a 25-hour curriculum with coaching sessions offered during the pilot. Through 2018 trainings are only available in pilot sites, including California, and will be available nationally beginning in 2019. NTI is funded through the Department of Health and Human Services, Administration for Children and Families, Children's Bureau, Cooperative Agreement #90CO1121.

Centralized Post Adoption Resource Site; California Kids Connection (CKC); Includes menu of ten categories of post permanency resources. Whether a family is looking for summer camps, skilled therapists, or the latest information about SOGIE related developments, they may click on a topic and find a list of providers near their county of residence. If a family does not find the resource they were looking for, they may also contact the referral line by calling 1(800) KIDS-4US. This toll-free line connects families directly with CKC program staff to answer additional inquiries. Monolingual Spanish speaking families are also encouraged to call the referral line to speak with someone in Spanish. These community-based resources and services are updated often, so families should check back to get the most current information. <https://www.cakidsconnection.org/PostAdoption>

Understanding the Need for Adoption-Competent Mental Health Services

Adoption-Competent Therapy Vs. Regular Therapy; What Is the Difference? Holt International – Post Adoption Service Blog; Discusses some common misunderstandings or misdiagnoses that adopted children encounter in the mental/behavioral health profession. The article includes observations on how adopted children – of all ages – are at risk for changes in their brain's chemistry and structure. These alterations don't just go away with time and, if not effectively treated, can become increasingly problematic as a child grows older. A generalist therapist may conclude that the child is untreatable. Or the parents may repeatedly change therapists, keeping up hope that this next therapist will have the magic cure. This cycle of dashed hopes brings everyone down.

It addresses the fact that for a variety of reasons, mental health professionals typically do not receive the training required to fill adoption-related counseling needs and, too often, either do not fully understand why such training is necessary or mistakenly believe the knowledge they already have is sufficient.

FINDING AN ADOPTION-COMPETENT THERAPIST

Parenting any child, born to you or not, brings challenges. Children can be wonderfully creative in their choices of behaviors to test your limits, try to have things go their way, or protect themselves when they do not feel safe. When those behaviors are troubling, you may wonder if it is normal childhood development for a child that age, or something related to their adoption or guardianship. The time may come when you decide to seek help from a mental health professional. Here are some things you should keep in mind when you do:

- Members of adoptive and guardianship families may need professional help when concerns arise. Adoption-competent professionals often can prevent concerns from becoming more serious problems.
- Not all therapists are trained to deal with the needs of adoptive and guardianship families. In fact, most therapists do not receive adoption clinical training as part of their standard curriculum.
- Children adopted from foster care are a vulnerable population. When mental health needs and challenges inherent in adoption or guardianship are left unaddressed, these unmet and misunderstood mental health needs are likely to derail normal child development.
- Challenging behaviors can be a child's way of communicating. They may be telling us something, responding to triggers that send them back to their days of trauma, neglect and abuse. They may be trying to control their environments because they don't believe they will be safe if they do not.
- Adoptive families, including those who adopted years ago and those who have built their families more recently form a large chorus crying out for access to mental health professionals who understand their unique issues.
- Asking for help when needed is a strength, not a weakness.

"As foster and adoptive parents, we are told repeatedly that it is crucial for our children to go to therapy. It can, indeed, be an incredibly helpful tool...if it is guided by an adoption-competent therapist in a model that includes the parents. The attachment-savvy therapist understands that the family is the healing agent and the parent-child relationship is a priority. With the right therapist, we can have access to more help than ever before.

Therapy is not about "fixing" the child. Therapists trained in adoption and permanency know that it is about building on the strengths of the people in that child's world, sharing ways in which we can weave attachment-building moments into our everyday interactions. It's about strengthening relationships, honoring connections and equipping the family for its journey toward healing."

QUESTIONS TO EXPLORE WITH POTENTIAL THERAPISTS FOR YOUR ADOPTION OR GUARDIANSHIP FAMILY

1. What training have you received on working with adoptive and guardianship families to help them address adoption and permanency clinical issues? What have you learned from those trainings?
2. What is your experience with adoption and adoption issues? (Be specific about the adoption issues, such as open adoption, transracial adoption, grief and loss, searching for birth relatives, abuse or institutionalization history, or attachment difficulties.)
3. What are some of the important, but different, issues for children adopted as newborns and those placed later?
4. Have you ever worked with children who were not infants at the time of their adoption, or with children who were in foster care?
5. What percentage of your clients are adoptive or guardianship families? (ideally 1/3 or more)
6. Do you see the child individually or in a family therapy model? (Look for a therapist who understands the importance of using a family therapy model, especially in the first session.)
7. How do you include the parents/caregivers in therapy?
8. How do you address behavioral concerns? (Avoid therapists who recommend punitive measures, including loss-based discipline – time-out alone, etc.)
9. Do you have experience working with international and trans-racial adoptees? (if applicable)
10. Do you attend conferences related to adoption needs and concerns? (Some good ones are held by the American Adoption Congress, Child Welfare League of America and North American Council on Adoptive Children.)
11. What are your thoughts on open versus closed adoption? (Should favor open across the board with the exception of very contentious situations.)
12. Do you know of any local support groups for adoptive parents, adoptees or birth parents?
13. Are you a licensed mental health professional or being supervised by a licensed mental health professional?
14. How long have you been in practice, and what degrees, licenses or certifications do you have?
15. Notice if they ask probing questions when you tell them you are an adoptive or guardianship family.
16. Find out what they understand about implicit/pre-verbal memory.
17. Notice if they make negative comments about the family of origin or country of origin.

TIP SHEET FOR ADOPTIVE PARENTS AND GUARDIANS

TIP #1

Understand the unique developmental needs of children and youth who have experienced trauma and loss, so you can be prepared to address your child's needs as they arise.

TIP #2

Be open with your child or youth as soon as possible, at their developmental level, about adoption and guardianship, and support them to express feelings about their own story. Understand that examining and talking about their story is an ongoing process that they may revisit at different developmental stages, page 34.

TIP #3

Examine your own beliefs about asking for help as you begin the process of building your family.

TIP #4

When you are ready to seek out a mental health professional, select one with specialized training and experience in adoption and permanency clinical issues. Ask your agency's post-permanency support staff for referrals.

TIP #5

Know that you are not alone, and not the only family to face challenges. Build a network of support with family and friends and include other adoptive and guardianship families in your network.

TIP #6

Advocate for your child and family with their teachers and coaches. Educate the educators about the diversity of families they serve, so that adoption and guardianship youth do not feel invisible or discriminated against in school settings.

TIP #7

Children who experience traumatic or stressful events may exhibit challenging behavior. This can be hard for you, of course, and can be particularly tough when you and your child are in social situations. It may be helpful to let those close to you know that the child is going through a stressful and traumatic time so they can join you in being supportive and non-judgmental even in the face of challenging behavior.

TIPS FOR PARENTS PARENTING AFTER FOSTER CARE: ADDRESSING YOUR CHILD'S MENTAL HEALTH NEEDS

Parents who have adopted or become legal guardians of a child or youth from foster care may find themselves unprepared to manage their child's or youth's mental health needs. Any training they may have received related to the trauma and loss experienced by children in foster care often becomes a distant memory. Once permanency has been established, they no longer have a case manager to consult with. This can leave parents feeling isolated and alone when facing challenges. Many families are unaware of the post-permanency services offered by the child welfare or adoption agency that facilitated their adoption or guardianship or provides their adoption or Kin-Gap subsidy. Others may be hesitant to admit they are in need of help.

Sadly, to many parents in our society, the idea of seeking help for themselves, their child or their family is a sign of weakness. For adoptive parents and guardians, this belief may be even more common. As part of the fostering, adoption and guardianship process, families must go through an initial assessment. Some may feel that they had to 'prove themselves' to be good enough to become a parent. When a child or youth is struggling, some believe that it's their fault...or that their child's problems may indicate some deficit in their parenting abilities. It is common for parents to experience feelings of embarrassment, shame or inadequacy. It's important for families to know that they are not the only ones who face these challenges and that there is strength in knowing when to ask for help.

Reluctance to request help from a post-permanency child welfare worker, or to decide to seek therapy or counseling, may be difficult to overcome. It's helpful to examine feelings you may have around asking for help as you embark on the journey of parenting. Examine your attitudes around the possibility of needing help before you need it!

Understand that your child's or youth's earlier experiences can lead to future challenges for them at different developmental stages. It's important to recognize that there are some skills that professionals have that most average folks just don't have. We readily seek professional help when our washing machine breaks down. When we have a leaky pipe we call a plumber. We seek out a mechanic when our car breaks down if we can't fix it ourselves. There's no shame in getting help when it comes to home repairs or fixing an appliance. And, we go to the doctor when we are sick or hurt beyond a cold, cough or minor injury. But somehow in our society, many of us have taken on the belief that if our spirits or minds are hurting, there's shame in seeking help.

NEEDED IS A STRENGTH, NOT A WEAKNESS.

TIPS FOR PARENTS DEBUNKING MYTHS ABOUT ADOPTED CHILDREN/YOUTH AND FAMILIES

Not all adoptees are troubled. Recent long-term studies of adoptees in America show that they are no different in emotional health, psychological well-being, self-esteem and attachment to family as children raised by their biological parents.

Adoptive Families: The Top Ten Myths about Adoption

<https://www.adoptivefamilies.com/how-to-adopt/myths-about-adoption/>

Not all children from foster care have special needs, are violent or are troubled.

While many children in foster care do indeed have some special needs that must be addressed, it doesn't mean they are troubled or violent. These children have experienced a terrible loss and sometimes a traumatic early life. They are strong and capable of healing. They may test boundaries, push buttons, need time, extra love and support, or even medical, therapeutic or educational assistance, but it is not something that should keep you from considering adoption from foster care. Education is your best defense and preventative measure in succeeding in this type of adoption!

HELPING CHILDREN AND YOUTH WITH GRIEF AND LOSS

Common Themes:

- Grief
- Loyalty
- Rejection
- Fear of Abandonment
- Trust
- Identity
- Self-esteem

Children who have suffered a loss through death, divorce, foster care, adoption or other separations seem to share several common issues. However, each child will react or respond to the loss dependent upon:

1. The significance of the loss
2. Whether the loss is temporary or permanent
3. Inherent coping abilities of the child
4. Availability of supports
5. Age and cognitive abilities of the child (at the time of loss and at the present time)

Consequently, while some children may react in extreme ways, others may respond mildly or not at all. In addition, while one child may be affected in the area of loyalty, for example, another may be preoccupied with identity issues.

TIPS FOR PARENTS

CONTINUUM OF DEVELOPMENT OF ADOPTED CHILDREN

Adapted from Ohio Child Welfare Training Program from a handout developed by Parenthesis Family Advocates, Columbus, Ohio

0-3 Years	3-7 Years	8-12 Years	12-16 Years	16-19 Years
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Adopted child does not realize difference between themselves and non-adopted children. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Child asks a lot of questions. • Loves to hear his/her adoption story. • Can repeat it verbatim but has little understanding of the concepts. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Child understands concept of adoption. • Begins grieving process. • May stop asking questions as part of denial. • Realizes that he/she had to lose something to be adopted. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Child enters anger stage of grieving. • May resist authority and try on new identities. • May be angry over loss of control in his/her life. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Youth may be depressed and over-react to losses. • May be anxious about growing up and leaving home.
STRATEGIES FOR PARENTS
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Collect as much concrete information as possible (goodbye letters from birthparents and pictures are helpful). • Develop a "Life Book" for child, including these concrete bits of information. • Begin talking comfortably and positively with your infant, family and friends about adoption. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Encourage questions and answer honestly. • Difficult issues may be omitted (but never changed) until child is older. • Tell their Adoption Story as a favorite bedtime story. • Use and add to their Life Book. • Reassure your child that he/she will not lose their adoptive family. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Don't force your child to discuss issues but let him/her know you are open and comfortable when he/she is ready. • Let your child know it is understood that he/she can love both sets of parents. He/she does not have to choose. • Ask if your child has questions or feelings he/she would like to discuss. • Let your child know you are not threatened or angry about questions regarding birth family and/or past history. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Allow your child to exercise control whenever possible. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Provide opportunities for decision-making. • Help your child access and accept his/her birth information. • Try to keep from responding to child's anger with more anger. Understand that much of his anger is directed at the birthparent. • Be firm in limit-setting. Establish preset consequences for broken rules. Allow child to experience natural consequences of behavior. • Continue to let child know that you love him/her no matter what. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Let child know he/she may remain at home after graduation if he/she chooses. • Be alert for sadness when relationships with peers fail or during anniversary reactions such as birthdays or Mother's Day. • Continue to keep adoption topic open within the home. • Provide supportive opportunities for independence and freedom.

TIPS FOR PARENTS AAP/KIN-GAP AND SSI/SSA SURVIVOR BENEFITS

All prospective adoptive and kin guardian families should be informed of Adoption Assistance and Kin-Gap Program regulations related to a child's Social Security income. While child welfare workers can share general information with families that is detailed below, family circumstances and benefit types vary. If a child is receiving SSI or SSA survivor's benefits, families will ultimately need to seek advice from Social Security about how their Adoption Assistance or Kin-Gap Program funding may impact them and their child's SSI or SSA benefits. Specific questions regarding continued eligibility for SSI and SSA, or questions families have regarding the amount of Social Security income that the child may receive in addition to the specific AAP or Kin-Gap grant must be asked by the family to Social Security staff. Adoption and guardianship staff do not have a role nor the authority to discuss an adopted child's Social Security benefits with the Social Security Administration.

Adoption program regulations are clear. An AAP grant cannot be reduced based on a child's SSI or SSA income.

"The reduction of the AAP benefit amount based on any type of income the child receives from a birth parent/relative or adoptive parent is prohibited. The amount of AAP a child receives cannot be reduced to a formula and/or lessened dollar for dollar based upon any resources the child, adoptive parents or family receives from any source including SSI or survivor's benefits." (All County Letter (ACL) 09-51)

Likewise, a federally funded Kin-Gap grant cannot be reduced based on a child's SSI or SSA income, however state-funded Kin-Gap grants will be.

Note: The Adoption Assistance (AAP) and federal Kin-Gap programs are entitlement programs for adopted and guardianship children, not the adoptive parents or guardians. This program is governed by the Social Security Act, Sections 471, 472, 473 and 475 and California state law Welfare and Institutions Codes Sections 16115 through 16125 and California Code of Regulations Title 22 Sections 35325 through 35352.2. The intent of P.L. 96-272-The Adoption Assistance and Child Welfare Act of 1980 is that AAP benefits are to follow the child and be used to benefit the child, and not to be counted as income for a parent. Adoptive parents are not recipients of adoption assistance benefits; rather, adoption assistance benefits are made on the child's behalf to meet his or her needs. Likewise, P.L.110-351 makes it clear that the income of the child's parents, Kin-GAP guardian or any other relative living in the household is not to be used to determine the child's federal Kin-GAP eligibility.

Important information to share with families regarding AAP and Social Security income:

- The Social Services Agency determines the maximum AAP or Kin-Gap amount the child is eligible for.
- Social Security determines the SSI or SSA benefit amount, if any, that the child is eligible for. Social Security may take into account the family's income and/or the child's AAP or Kin-Gap income.
- A family adopting a child eligible for Title IV-E Adoption Assistance or Kin-Gap who is also receiving SSI benefits is entitled to the full AAP or Kin-Gap grant based on the child's basic and special needs. The AAP or Federal Kin-Gap grant cannot be reduced due to any other income the child may receive, earned or unearned. (State-only Kin-Gap grants will be offset by the amount of a Social Security benefit.)
- The family is responsible to inform Social Security about receipt of any AAP or Kin-Gap income. Social Security may make an adjustment to the Social Security benefit amount as a result of the child's AAP or Kin-Gap income.
- AAP, federal Kin-Gap and Social Security are all federal programs. Recipients of federal programs cannot receive overlapping benefits; the total benefit amount received cannot be more than the maximum benefit the child is eligible for. (See case examples below.)

- An adopted child (or a child in kin guardianship), if eligible, may benefit from both programs simultaneously. In cases where the child is eligible for both SSI and AAP or Kin-Gap and there are payments from both programs, the child's SSI payment may be reduced, depending on the type of Social Security. The maximum amount the family can receive from either or both programs is the maximum benefit the child is eligible for. (See case examples below.)
- In order to avoid being charged with any future or retroactive overpayments by Social Security, families should be informed that they are responsible to advise Social Security that they will be receiving AAP or Kin-Gap for their adopted (or guardianship) child.
- Depending on their circumstances, the adoptive family may choose to apply for AAP or Kin-Gap funding or may choose to only receive Social Security benefits for their child.
- If the family chooses Social Security income only, and they plan to put their child on their private health insurance:
 - Adoptive families should defer AAP prior to the finalization of the adoption. If they need or choose to put the child on Medi-Cal, they should apply for AAP, with a $0 cash grant, and request Medi-Cal only. Families should do this prior to finalization of the Adoption. AAP must be started or deferred prior to finalization of the adoption to be eligible for AAP anytime in the future.
 - Kin guardian families should apply for Kin-Gap with a $0 cash grant. Families should do this prior to the dismissal of dependency and establishment of guardianship (Note: children and youth in Kin-Gap are categorically eligible for Medi-Cal until age 26.)
- If a family defers AAP, they can come back any time before the child's 18th birthday to request that AAP benefits begin or a cash grant be started.

AAP/KIN-GAP AND SSI/SSA SURVIVOR BENEFITS

Below are some examples of possible scenarios. They are used only to highlight some possible scenarios, taking into account different circumstances. Again, due to the complexity of the Social Security program, child welfare staff should not give advice to families regarding Social Security, and direct case specific questions to Social Security.

Case example A:

Mary is eligible to receive a $889 total AAP or Kin-Gap grant (basic and special care rate) and has been receiving $1,000 from Social Security (SSI for his disability). The family will receive $889 from AAP or Kin-Gap and the Social Security grant is adjusted to $111. The total funding from both programs will be $1,000 (the maximum amount the child is eligible for). The family will NOT be eligible to receive $889 plus $1,000 ($1,889).

Case example B:

Mary is eligible to receive a $889 total AAP or Kin-Gap grant (basic and special care rate) and has been receiving $1,000 from Social Security (SSI for his disability). The adoptive family chooses to defer the $889 from AAP a –they will receive a $0 AAP cash grant and get Medi-Cal only. The Kin-Gap family chooses to apply for a $0 cash grant. The full Social Security grant of $1,000 will continue.

Case example C:

Anthony is eligible to receive a $1,100 total AAP or Kin-Gap grant (basic and special care rate). He has been receiving $400 from Social Security (SSI for his disability). The AAP or Kin-Gap benefit will be $1,100 (it is the maximum he is eligible for). Social Security benefits will stop.

Case example D:

Anthony is eligible to receive a $1,189 total AAP or Kin-Gap grant (basic and special care rate). He receives $400 SSA survivor benefits from his biological father. The AAP or Kin-Gap benefit will be the full $1,189 he is eligible for. His Social Security survivor benefit will continue in the full amount of $400. The total income from both programs will be $1,589.

Case example E:

Anthony is eligible to receive a $889 total AAP or Kin-Gap grant (basic and special care rate). His prospective adoptive or kin guardian family had been receiving SSI funds, paid directly to them as his caregivers while in foster care, in the amount of $1,000, based on Anthony's disability. The family has checked with Social Security, and due to the family's income after adoption, they will not be eligible for the SSI payments. The family will receive AAP or Kin-Gap only. The family is not in agreement with the agency's determination of the maximum AAP or Kin-Gap rate of $889, and the family and the agency are unable to negotiate a higher rate. The family will receive a notice of action of that we have been unable to agree on an AAP or Kin-Gap rate. They may appeal our decision and request a fair hearing before an administrative law judge.

TIP SHEET FOR ADOPTED YOUTH AND THOSE IN GUARDIANSHIPS

TIP #1

If you were in foster care, you likely experienced trauma and loss.

- Know that you're not alone, or the only one to face challenges.
- Feelings around your experiences may come up for you at different times.
- Trauma and loss can make it difficult to maintain close relationships.
- It's important to have someone safe to talk to when these feelings come up.

TIP #2

Dealing with your experiences and feelings is a process and a journey that may reveal itself to you in different ways and at different times throughout your life.

- Looking at your experiences is not a one-time deal.
- Working through your feelings is an ongoing process.
- Research on how our brains work has led to new understanding and hope that we can heal from trauma and loss.

TIP #3

Asking for help is difficult for most people.

- Everyone needs help sometimes, and the best way to get it is to ask!
- It's important to look to people who you know care about you.
- People can become numb to their emotional pain or feel hopeless so they don't seek help. Don't let this happen to you.

TIP #4

Asking for help for yourself when needed is a valuable strength to have in life.

- Some people go their whole life without learning this!
- It may make you feel vulnerable or fear being seen as weak, but asking for help is a sign of strength and a way to get you what you need.
- It's okay to ask for help

TIP #5

We must challenge and debunk the stigma and shame in our society around seeking help for mental health issues.

- More and more people are talking about this. There is a national movement to debunk this myth.
- In our society, many of us have taken on the belief that if our spirits or minds are hurting, there's shame in seeking help. This is just not true.
- There's no more shame in getting professional help when our hearts and minds hurt than in getting help when it comes to home repairs or fixing an appliance, or going to the doctor when sick or hurt in other parts of your body.

TIP SHEET FOR ADOPTED YOUTH AND THOSE IN GUARDIANSHIPS

TIP #6

It's wise to ask for help before things get too hard.

- Ignoring painful feelings doesn't make them go away, and often negatively impacts our behavior and relationships.
- Pain can get worse if not dealt with.

TIP #7

Talk about your feelings!

- Sharing what you're going through with a family member or friend can make you feel less alone and help you process your experiences.
- Understand that while examining and talking about your experiences may be difficult, it is better to do so than to keep your feelings in and stay silent.

TIP #8

Sometimes we need more help than a friend or parent can offer.

When you look for professional help, it's important to seek out a therapist with specialized training and experience in adoption and permanency issues.

- Being adopted or in a guardianship after foster care brings up unique concerns that not all mental health providers are trained to understand.
- Public and private child welfare and adoption agencies can refer you to a therapist with the necessary training and experience.

TIP #9

Take action!

- Join or build a network of support with other former foster youth, adopted and guardianship youth.
- Become an advocate in school and in your community to debunk the stigma against seeking mental health care.
- Educate others to recognize the diverse families that live among us.
- Speak out about the need for adoption-competent clinicians in your community.
- Replace the stigma and empower others.
